Keriana Brooking

Keriana joined PwC as a Partner in October 2022, bringing more than 34 years in the Public Service including 20 years extensive experience in the New Zealand health sector. Throughout her career, Keriana has had a strong social focus and understands that the gap between intent and execution is best filled by blending context, content and aspiration.

She firmly believes that everyone living in Aotearoa should have the opportunity to live their best life, and is passionate about helping people successfully determine, shape and deliver on their aspirations – and says it's one of the greatest feelings in the world.

Prior to joining PwC, Keriana held senior executive roles in the New Zealand health sector, most recently as interim National Director Commissioning of Te Whatu Ora, Health NZ. Prior to that, she has had chief executive experience at Hawke's Bay DHB, Turanganui Primary Health Organisation and as a Deputy Director General at Manatū Hauora, Ministry of Health.

Keriana lives with her husband in the Hawke's Bay. She is a reluctant gardener and is being put to the test with an assortment of fruit trees growing with free abandon on their property. She is proud to be the NZ Police College Wing 366 Patron.
